GOOD NEWS FOR HOMEMAKERS

By Shirley W. Walton

KNOW BEFORE YOU MOW

Grass has a way of growing whether you want it to or not. It seems that the only way to keep your lawn from looking like a jungle is to keep mowing it. Sometimes during the rainy season this time of year you need to cut grass maybe twice a week.

The most powerful weapon in the homeowner's arsenal for this type of task is a power mower, or the big objective, the lawn tractor. The trick is not to become a casualty yourself in the unending war against the green menace. I wish to recommend the following guidelines for this year's safety campaign as you keep that grass in good order:

1. Know how to operate the mower before starting it. Read the instruction manual.

2. Wear proper clothing. Safety toe shoes are advisable. Do not cut grass with tennis shoes or sneakers.

3. Fill the gas tank outdoors with the funnel away from possible ignition sources. Replace the gas cap firmly. Do not smoke when handling gas or other fuels.

4. Check the lawn and remove any obstacles that could be thrown by the mower.

5. Keep other people out of the mowing area. Be sure that children play in the yard while you are mowing in the area they are playing.

6. Never cut grass when it is wet, or when there is not enough light.

7. Be sure the mower is on ground level. Disengage all clutches and stand to one side before starting. Keep hands and feet away from the blade area.

8. Do not walk in front of the mower's discharge chute while the motor is running.

9. If your mower is self-propelled, it was designed to go at a certain speed. Do not force it to mow faster than that speed. It will not properly cut the grass.

10. Make sure all the guards are in place while mowing. Keep blades properly sharpened.

11. If mowing on an incline with a walk-behind mower, mow across the incline, never up and down. If using a lawn tractor, do the opposite. Mow up and down to prevent the tractor from tipping on its side and penning you underneath.

12. Lay out the power cord of an electric mower carefully to avoid cutting it with blades. In addition, mow away from the electrical outlet so that you will not be constantly crossing the cord and having to move it.

13. Never leave your mower running unattended. Shut off and disconnect the spark wire or power cord. This should be done whenever you are cleaning or adjusting the mower.

14. Store gasoline in a safety storage can.

15. Never yank electrical power mower cords from the outlet. Always use the proper Underwriter's Laboratory listed extension cord for use with the mower.

16. Always keep mower in top operating condition. This will lengthen the life of your mower, whatever type it might be.

17. If you should hit a foreign object, cut off the power. If it is an electric mower, disconnect the power. Inspect the mower for damage. Have the damage repaired before restarting the mower.

Homemaker, cutting grass is something all of us will be doing a good bit of for the next few months. Please do this job carefully. This is not a job for small children to do. It makes me shutter and tremble when I see little children on riding lawn mowers. Please be careful and cautious because these mowers can be very dangerous fi not properly handled by an adult.

If you have a homemaking question or problem, you may call us at 352-8244 or write us at P. O. Box 488, Appomattox, Virginia 24522. It is always a pleasure to hear from you and to help you.

Have a good week, homemakers!

HINT FOR THE WEEK:

I am always learning good tips from homemakers. Thanks to Bea Hudson for this tip of the week. Should you get ballpoint pen ink on a clothing article, you may remove it with hairspray. Use the hairspray directly on the spot where the ink is. You will see the ink almost disappear before your eyes. If there is an excessive amount of ink, you may have to do some blotting to remove it. After the ink is out of the fabric, run some cold water over the garment. Presto, ballpoint ink is out! Thanks to Bea Hudson for sharing this good tip for the week.

Reed's and Mark's Special Chili

2 cans Home Style Beans
3 cans chili without beans
1 cup water
½ cup chopped green pepper
½ cup chopped red onion
¼ cup Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon Texas Pete hot sauce
½ teaspoon garlic powder
1 cup shredded sharp cheese
3 cups barbecued corn chips

Heat together all ingredients except cheese and corn chips until mixture begins to boil. Simmer for about 15 minutes, then add cheese. Stir until cheese melts. Serve in individual bowls with corn chips on top. Serves eight.

Students in the Family Living classes at ACHS have enjoyed this easy to prepare, yet very hot and tasty, chili recipe. The corn chips add variety that is very pleasing to use rather than the old favorite of chili with saltine crackers.

This recipe was prepared originally by Reed Johnson and Mark Chevalier in a Family Living Class at ACHS. Many thanks to these good cooks for sharing this delicious dish with us.

There seems to have been a surge of deaths in the states horse population. The cause if from feeling moldy feed, grain and especially corn.

Affected horses develop muscle tremors and weakness. They stagger, cannot swallow, walk in circles, become depressed and die. Death usually occurs within 48 to 72 hours after first observed.

The prevention is simply watch feed supply. Feed only clean, wholesome feed.

The United States has what is probably the most modern marketing system in the world today. It includes a multitude of functions: producing, buying, selling, transporting, assembling, storing, processing, packaging, and merchandising.

One of the missing links is with the producer who sometimes gets so involved in the art of production, that he fails to exercise some of his marketing alternatives. The coming years will see the producer adapting some old and even some new marketing methods if he is to compete successfully.

Within the U. S. Department of Agriculture there is a division called Agricultural Marketing Service. Some of the areas that it is involved in are: Market News, Packers and Stockyards Act, Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, U. S. Warehousing Act, Agricultural Fair Practices Act, Federal Seed Act, Plant Variety Protection Act, Standardization and Grading, Federal-State Marketing Improvement Program, Research and Promotion and other minor services.

Cutworms are taking their toll this spring, but the home gardener can easily handle this problem by putting a cardboard collar around newly set plants.

• • •

Experienced gardeners accept the fact that spring planted cabbage will head-up, burst and shoot up flower stalks in mid-summer if not harvested fairly promptly. It's only natural - cabbages reproduce that way.

What really is upsetting is when cabbages are growing beautifully and they go to seed just before harvest stage.

Premature flowering is called "bolting" and is caused by prolonged exposure to cold weather. If you start early or use large transplants, and they are exposed to continuous 40 to 50 degree weather for 30 to 60 days, some or all of the plants will bolt.

Research shows that the best way to avoid bolting is to start with small plants. Transplants should have leaves no more than 1 to 1½ inches wide.

• • •

Want to try re-cycling plant material this year? If you are growing the giant or mammoth sunflowers this year try this. After the seedhead has been harvested with a pair of pruning shears, saw off the sturdy, fibrous stalks, strip the remaining leaves and dry. Store the stalks over winter in a dry location and next summer use the stalks to make tripods to support vining vegetables or flowers. They are rustic and very attractive. Finally they are biodegradable - - that is, they return to the soil to add humus.

ERNIE W. LUCAS, PASTOR
"The Root of the Matter"
Job 19:28
The greatest proof of original sin is the universal depravity of mankind, for which it is impossible to account in a satisfactory manner unless we admit the depravity of their nature. If it is allowed, on all hands, that a tree is known by its fruit (Matt. 7:17-20) and a man's disposition by his words and actions (luke 6:45), this rule ought in fairness be applied to the whole race; and finding them all corrupt in practice we are bound to conclude that they are corrupt in heart. If man is pure in heart when he comes into the world, religion cannot make him better; and if he has some unruly appetites, but possesses nobler principles to control them, he needs no assistance, or only such assistance as is afforded by the external teaching of the Word and the working of God's providence. But no person who takes the Bible as his instructor can believe that nothing more is needed. A change is there described which human power cannot effect; the work is that of the Spirit of God in the new birth, which gives life to dead sinners, and raises them up to become "new creatures in Christ Jesus" (II Cor. 5:17). Reader, are you trusting to a supposed goodness of heart for your righteous standing before God, or have you thrown yourself upon God's mercy for salvation and rest only in the blood and righteousness of Jesus Christ for your acceptance before God? Christ Jesus, and Him only, is a sinner's hope for salvation. (Eph. 1:6).

Historical Society to Meet at "Red Fields"

Through the courtesy of the present owners, Mrs. William E. (Bill) Jamerson, Mr. Berkley Drinkard and Mr. John Harrison, Jr., the historic house "Red Fields" will be the setting for the June meeting of the Appomattox Historical Society - Monday, June 11, at 7:00 p.m.

"Red Fields" is a most appropriate setting for the pursuit of Appomattox architectual history. Built about 1850 by George Abbitt, the ancestor of many Appomattox natives, "Red Fields" had the unique feature of third floor rooms with the dividing walls between each half of the upper story having no accessibility from one side to the other side of the house. To reach the upper rooms one had to use the/ one of the two staircases on the lower floor that led to the right or the left side of the upper story.

The program will be presented by Mrs. Gail Williams, recent author of an historical research project on "Red Fields". Mrs. Williams, her husband, Walt, and three sons, Jody, Jeff and Danny reside on Dogwood Street in the Morris Heights area of Appomattox.

Following Mrs. Williams' presentation the meeting will be open to members and guests who may wish to add historical notes of interest concerning "Red Fields" and the family of Mr. George Abbitt.

Mrs. Lucille Ferrell, president of the Historical Society, extends the invitation to Appomattox County citizens to join with members of the Appomattox Historical Society for the June 11th meeting at "Red Fields."

The house is unfurnished. For comfortable seating, bring a chair.
